

Minneapolis

Permaculture Resource Guide

Get involved with local projects, places, and organizations that are making the shift towards a regenerative, more permanent human culture (perma-culture) on Earth through education, community building, and action.

Frogtown Farm V

Work with Frogtown Farm to build an urban farm in downtown St. Paul to serve as a hub for a healthy, local food system.

Eat food sourced in your city with frogtownfarm.org/

Sisters' Camelot V C

Sisters Camelot is a 501c3 non-profit that promotes sustainability and strengthened community, and unconditionally shares healthy food in the community.
sisterscamelot.org

Gardening Matters V E

Gardening Matters is a non-profit dedicated to preserving community gardening by connecting gardeners to each other, and providing education, training, and resources. Their goal is to enhance community food systems.

Grow the local foodshed with gardeningmatters.org/

North Country Food Alliance V E

North County Food Alliance is a non-profit organization that increases access to and shares food with people in need, networking with local organizations to utilize excess produce. Provide foraging workshops!

Put your hands in the dirt with northcountryfoodalliance.org/

Stones Throw Urban Farm V C

Work with Stones Throw Urban Farm to create a dynamic urban farm that strives toward sustainability and community empowerment and financial viability. Focus on turning vacant lots into agricultural plots.

Put your hands in the dirt with stonesthrowurbanfarm.com/

Beez Kneez C E

The Beez Kneez is a honeybee education and advocacy organization. They keep bees, deliver raw, local honey by bicycle, and teach in-hive education classes at Twin Cities community spaces and urban farms. They also operate the first ever community beekeeping center, The Beez Kneez Honey House.

Learn about pollinators with thebezkneezdelivery.com/

Symbol Key

E Educational Opportunities

C Community Supported Agriculture (CSA)
fresh produce delivery available

V Volunteer opportunities